Bomb threats to schools are a significant problem throughout the United States. Although more than 90% of bomb threats turn out to be pranks, school districts must take each threat seriously because of the real potential for death and serious injury. The problem of bomb threats is an annual occurrence for many school districts, resulting in days lost from teaching and learning, emotional trauma to students and staff, and financial costs.

Effective response to school bomb threats requires the coordinated efforts of administration, faculty, staff, and first responders. For school administration, the principle decision involves whether to evacuate, partially evacuate and shelter-in-place, or take no action. However, each procedure is associated with certain critical tasks necessary to ensure a safe and effective response.

This course addresses issues and considerations involved in developing a safe and effective school bomb threat response plan annex as part of the School Emergency and Crisis Response Plan. This is a pre-requisite course for the AWR-130 Incident Response to Terrorist Bombings.
